Looking Ahead:

CASP 2009 San Antonio, Texas
October 20-23, 2009

A Towering Passion for Teaching and Learning

San Antonio has always been a crossroads for travelers, explorers, and those who have a passion for teaching and learning. We look forward to hosting next year's conference at the El Tropicano Riverwalk Hotel and providing fantastic opportunities for professional development.

The new extension of the San Antonio River allows for the water taxis to pick up visitors at the hotel and take them on a relaxing ride that meanders down the river through the heart of San Antonio. Visitors experience the sights, sounds, tastes and fusion of cultures that will entice them to come again. San Antonio is a shopper's paradise. El Mercado, La Villita, River City Mall are downtown, and not far away are The Quarry, The Rim and La Cantera. You can also visit historical districts like the Missions, The Alamo and the King William District.

We look forward to seeing you October 20-23, 2009 in San Antonio!!

CASP '08 Features First-Class Pre-Conference Institutes

CASP 2008 offers some of the most unique and exciting pre-conference institutes ever!

Participants may have a difficult time choosing among the variety of fascinating topics, but any choice is the right choice since they are all superb.

If your program is interested in NADE certification, you've come to the right place! The NADE Certification pre-conference institute is planned to help attendees design their programs' theoretical frameworks, focus on criteria for best practices, and implement an on-going program assessment for goals attainment. The 7-hour institute begins on Tuesday, November 4, and will be completed at noon on Wednesday.

Essie Childers (Blinn College) has a novel idea to present to you in her pre-conference institute, "A Novel Plan: Motivation and Comprehension in Just Six Weeks!" This session will present ways to create interest and motivation in the reluctant reader through the use of novels. Participants, practicing various comprehension strategies in a group setting, will come away with creative ideas plus sample materials and a novel packet. Have you ever experienced burnout in your role as teacher? Jean Layne (Texas A&M University) will give you some strategies to deal with this common malady in her presentation, "Renewing/ Sustaining Expert Enthusiasm for Teaching and Student Learning." Who wouldn't want to come away with a renewed passion for his or her chosen profession? In addition, Jean will present another session, "Teaching Today's Students," to help teachers of today's "net-gen" students better relate to them, taking into account the differing generational perspectives. With a new sensitivity to these differences, teachers will be able to bring new ideas to their courses that better communicate to today's student.

Combine an institute and an excursion by participating in the "First Year Experience/King Ranch Institute." This unique all-day event will take you first to Texas A&M University-Kingsville where Dr. Dann Brown will relate the First Year Experience philosophy and the program designed to help the college freshman in his/her transition from high school to college. This program has been implemented at TAMUK, so participants will also hear the results and learn ways to begin such a program on their campuses. After lunch at TAMUK, the group will leave for a guided tour of the world famous King Ranch, the largest ranch in the United States. This part of the excursion will begin at the King Ranch Saddle Shop where you can shop for leather goods, items for the home, clothing and more. The group will then board a bus for an extensive guided tour of points of interest on the Ranch. Transportation to and from Kingsville/King Ranch will be provided. Learn how to bring the official CRLA tutoring program to your campus through the institute, "Tutor Program Certification-Getting Started." At CASP '08,

Olga Thurman (El Paso Community College) will introduce participants to the process of applying for certification while clarifying certification requirements. Come learn about the many benefits that this program can bring to your campus and to your students. Later in the day, Olga will, in a separate institute, work with those who may be further along in the certification process. This institute, "Tutor Program Certification Getting It Done," presents an opportunity to actually meet with ITPC evaluator(s) for advice on the specifics of completing the application process. Participants in this institute may bring their applications, documentation, and other materials for hands-on help.

If your school has established programs for peer-teaching, tutoring, Supplemental Instruction, mentoring, or academic peer-counseling, plan to attend "Tutor Training Leadership Institute – Year 11." Russ Hodges and Carol W. Dochen (Texas State University - San Marcos) are the facilitators for this three-hour-institute, which provides training from leading experts in the field of developmental education for undergraduate and graduate students involved in some form of peer teaching, tutoring, or counseling. This institute will also model training activities for learning center supervisors and coordinators. Participants who are seeking any level of CRLA Tutor Program Certification will receive three hours credit toward that certification.

Make plans now to attend one or more of these outstanding institutes at the CASP '08 conference.

CASP Conference Speakers

Dr. David Arendale

Dr. David Arendale will be the keynote speaker at the luncheon on Thursday. He is at the University of Minnesota-Twin Cities. He serves as an Assistant Professor in the Department of Postsecondary Teaching and Learning within the College of Education and Human Development. In addition to teaching history courses, he investigates the history of postsecondary college assessment, developmental education, and academic interventions that support improved student achievement and persistence. Dr. Arendale also supports the Peer Assisted Learning Program and works with other institutions in Minnesota supporting their efforts to improve academic achievement for their students.

Dr. Arendale served as President of the National Association for Developmental Education from 1996 to 1997. In 2000, he was recognized by the American Council of Developmental Education Associations for induction as a Founding Fellow of the profession. ## The Crabs Are Coming...

By Essie Childers

I had the wonderful opportunity this summer (before the devastation of Hurricane Ike) to retreat to Galveston and reside at the San Luis Resort. A retreat is a wonderful way to renew your mind and collect your thoughts for the next school year. While walking along the beach, I watched as the waves would rush in and out. It appeared as if the waves had rehearsed these rushing movements for an audience. Oh, the waves were so peaceful, calm and graceful.

One of my favorite things to do is to collect shells as I walk along the beach. You, perhaps, have done the same. This time, I was quite excited to see so many shells left on the bank by the waves. I gathered up a handful and quickly returned to my umbrella seat. Like a child, I carefully placed them on a nearby towel. What I found most interesting was that my shells had crabs inside of them. I watched the shells very closely in order to catch a crab coming out. In one of my shells, the crab moved slowly, peeking to see what was on the outside. The moment I tried to pull it out, the crab would quickly duck back inside. A few moments later the crab would move out a little further. With great anticipation, I moved slowly toward the shell to catch one of the arms. The moment it felt movement nearby, it would retreat back into the shell. In another shell, the crab never peeked out. It seemed to be quite content in its protective environment. Then, with another shell, I was able to successfully pull it out to an open area on the beach. I gave myself a clap. Once the crab was out, of course, it scurried along the beach to find new shelter or to explore new horizons.

The ocean rolls in many shells...just as a community college receives many students each semester. Students, like crabs, come in many different sizes, shapes, and colors...all unique and special. Students come to our classrooms from their protective environments (their shells). I pondered as I watched the crabs. How can I create an “engaging” classroom to make my students want to come out of their shells, to be excited to come to class? What can I do to “encourage” students to step out of their comfort zone...to be open to different learning strategies? What can I say to help create in them a sense of “self-efficacy”? The beginning of the semester is so important. It can set a tone for the rest of the semester. So, we need a big “hook.”

Here are a few “hooks” to use in creating an engaging classroom environment, not only for the first two weeks, but also throughout the semester:

1. Take 2 minutes during the first 2 weeks of school to make a personal connection with each of your students. Learn their names. You may ask, “How can I when I have so many students?” Many instructors come to class a little early to visit with students. Another opportunity to visit with students may be after class if time permits. My reading students write in their journal every day. Make a note and send them an e-mail responding to what they wrote. When students see that you are truly interested in their learning, they will participate more often in class.

Feature Article, Continued

2. Be enthusiastic about your class! Show excitement! If you are not excited about what you are teaching, how can you expect them to be anxious to come to class? When possible, use personal anecdotes to help students connect with new information. Use cartoons or mind teasers to help students get ready for the assignment. Be ready and organized for your class. Scholl-Buchwald suggests that one way to demonstrate enthusiasm is to talk about yourself and your own excitement about what you teach. What intrigues you, and what could interest them?

3. A well designed syllabus can go a long way in helping students feel comfortable in your class. They need to know the course goals, requirements and most importantly...your office hours. Many students are making the transition from high school, have new found freedom, and have a new schedule. An informative, user-friendly syllabus will help them in planning their study time for the course. Many instructors use the syllabus as their first quiz to encourage students to read it. Guess what? It works!

4. Use learning cells to create a “sense of belonging” in your classroom. Have students exchange contact information and assign a group leader. If a student in the group is absent, he/she will receive an e-mail or phone call from 1 or 2 people in the group. Groups can be effective in giving presentations by teaching selected sections of a chapter, creating quizzes, developing study sheets and much more. Arthur Chickering and Zelda Gamson state that working with others often increases involvement in learning. I have found that a group works best with 3-4 people.

5. Create a class motto. My class motto is “The desire to pass is useless without the desire to prepare.” It is posted in all my classrooms. The first week is also a good time to have students write out their expectations for the course and their own goals for learning. This will be quite helpful for them to refer to six weeks later when they seem to be running out of gas.

There are many more hooks that you can pull out of your toolbox. I have listed a few that can be used within the first few weeks.

Yes, the shells are rolling in from the vast ocean. Many are filled with crabs waiting for us to activate their schema. We have the awesome task to motivate and engage them to prevent them from crawling back into their shell. Each semester there is a new group of students rolling in seeking higher learning. Isn't it great and exciting to see students' light bulbs finally “glow” when they truly “understand” a concept? I think that is a most rewarding feeling. I am excited to be a part of the community college system to have an opportunity to help the students “glow” and guide them on their academic journey.

Congratulations to our new officers! Let's all offer our support in their efforts to move both TADE and Developmental Education forward in the state Texas.

In new positions:

President-Elect Carolyn Mello has served as membership chair of TADE. Carolyn's life is rich and diverse: she has taught public school students, adults, and convicted felons, and has worked as a counselor at a halfway house. In addition to her teaching duties, she conducts Study Skills Seminars to improve critical thinking, allowing students to maximize their potential for success in college. Currently, she teaches composition and developmental reading and writing at Lamar State College-Orange. Carolyn has worked with the Southeast Texas Hospice Dinner Theater and HEB's Feast of Sharing since 1992. The Orange Leader named Carolyn Mello as "Best of the Best" College Teacher in Orange County for 2005, 2006, and 2007.

The recent emphasis on Developmental Education from a state perspective and the talk of change in the field has piqued the interest in serving in a leadership role in our state TADE organization for Treasurer Glenda Solomon. Serving on the Executive Board of TADE in the treasurer's position will enable her to do that. In addition, she is interested in interacting with colleagues outside of her own campus (Collin College, Plano, TX) to exchange ideas that are helpful in both her own classroom and also within the college's Developmental Math Department. Her educational background and professional experience in both mathematics and accounting give her confidence to perform the duties and fulfill the responsibilities of the treasurer's position.

Solomon's education includes a BS in Mathematics from Texas Wesleyan University, MS in Education with a minor in Mathematics from Baylor University and MBA from the University of Mary-Hardin Baylor. She is currently a Professor in Developmental Mathematics at Collin College and has taught high school mathematics. She has also worked as a corporate accounting manager. Solomon is a member of TADE, NADE and the American Mathematical Association of Two-Year Colleges.

NADE Executive Board

NADE and Your Chapter Want YOU!

Chapters are as strong as their members, and NADE is as strong as its chapters, so NADE needs YOU to be a TADE chapter member and a NADE member!

If you are a NADE member and a chapter member, you benefit, your chapter benefits, and NADE benefits.

You benefit by an affiliation with like-minded professionals who share your enthusiasm for helping students learn and grow. You have the opportunity to discuss Developmental Education both globally and in field-specific issues through your selection of a free Special Interest Network (SPIN) membership. You have access to research and practical teaching and learning strategies through publications, conferences, newsletters, and networking with professionals from a variety of disciplines and institutions. NADE sends you the NADE Digest and Journal of Developmental Education as part of your membership. You have many opportunities to serve and develop as an educational leader, to publish, and to present conference sessions at chapter and national levels. In addition, as a chapter member and a NADE member, you are eligible for a variety of NADE awards and scholarships.

Your chapter benefits by having a core of state or regional educators who discuss significant local issues through newsletters, conferences, and unique educational partnerships. Your chapter also benefits from the camaraderie that develops and the leadership that emerges among educators from schools and programs across your state and region.

NADE is enriched by the diversity of its members – diversity in professional interests and backgrounds, educational programs, institution types, professional research and publications, and leadership and service opportunities within NADE.

Remember that NADE offers both individual and institutional memberships. Share membership information with colleagues and administrators at your institution. Membership applications are available on NADE's web site at www.NADE.net.

If you have any NADE membership questions or would like to get involved, please contact us at rkarr@cccd.edu or kpattyg@siue.edu.

Important Registration Information/Policies

Register early – Payment must be made in order to receive conference materials. Before you give the registration form to your institution's Business Office for processing, please send CASP a copy of the conference registration and fees. This is for your protection – many registrations are delayed for weeks at the institution before we receive them. Be sure to send an actual copy of the Agency Purchase Order (APO) as soon as it is available. An APO number without the actual APO form will not suffice. CASP Federal Employment ID number (FEIN) is 74-2933925.

Registration payments received on/after October 31st will need to register on-site. Even if an institution has mailed payment, participants will be unable to attend unless payment has been received. Participants will be asked to submit a personal check to the registrar prior to receiving conference materials. Personal checks will be held until November 21, 2008 and then deposited if an institutional check has not yet been received.

Refund policy – Due to CASP's contractual commitment to the hotel, cancellations postmarked after October 15, 2008 there will be a $25 cancellation fee. Cancellations postmarked after October 31, 2008 will require forfeiture of all fees. Refund checks will be issued after the conference.

Registrants who fail to cancel their registrations through the registrar will still be billed for the total conference registration fee even if they do not attend the conference.
